One space — different formats.

The same space can be read in different ways — depending on your format, your client journey and your operating requirements.

01

Retail

Will they notice me?

The shop window is seen from the street. Continuous glazing makes the shop visible from the boulevard.

The entrance is clear to customers. The route from the pavement into the space reads at a glance, with no complicated path through the building.

02

Showroom

Can the product be shown well here?

The space reads as open. The open layout allows a clear presentation of the product.

There is room for zoning. Display, consultation and support areas can be kept apart.

03

Client service

Is it easy for clients to get here?

Public transport close by. 8 public transport routes within a 350 m radius.

An established residential district. A steady local audience supports everyday service formats.

04

Office · customer centre

Does the space work for the team and for clients alike?

The space can be divided by function. There is room to organise work, client and support areas.

The client area can work on its own. Visitor reception can be kept apart from the team's internal work.

05

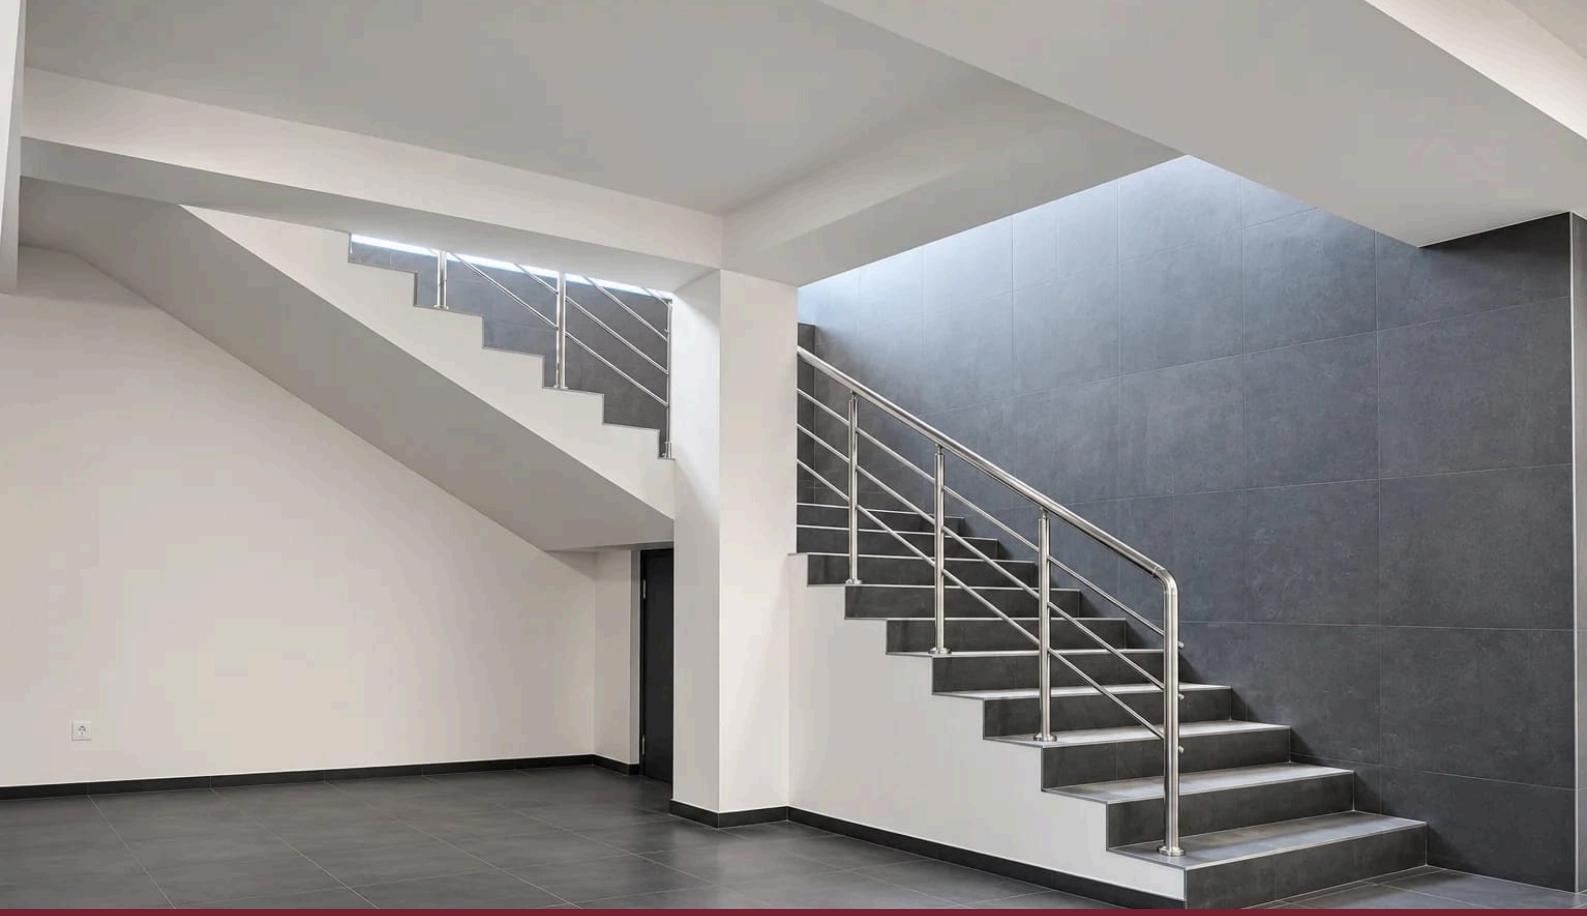

Manufacturer's Own Store

From producer to customer. Directly.

Glazing to the boulevard. The ground-floor glazing shows the products and the brand to Moscova Boulevard.

A direct entrance from the boulevard. The buyer walks in from the pavement — steps and a ramp, with no path through the building.

If the property suits you in location and format, the next step is to check the technical feasibility of your scenario. For regulated formats — clinics, medical services, food service and other activities — special technical and permit requirements are checked as well.
